THE LINE NINE MILES IN LENGTH.

New York Beaked Brilliantly in Honor of the Gallant Sailor Who Entered Her Gate.

A Million Visitors Are There to Participate in the Glorious Two Days Celebration in Honor of the Hero of Manila Bay.

New York, Sept. 29.—New York was decked brilliantly Thursday in honor of the gallant sailor who, waiting at her gate, had an ocean of color sweep through the city's ebullient tide. The parade, which started at 10 o'clock, consisted of the merchant marine steamers and an immense fleet of yachts, barges and unadorned vessels brought up the rear. The line was about nine miles long and half a million people were afloat.

The parade, with the Olympia in the van, moved up the North river to the stake boat St. Mary, an old practice ship of the navy which is moored opposite the Grant mansion in Riverside park. After rounding the stake, the Olympia came to anchor below two beautiful floats representing Peace and Victory, and each war ship in its turn dropped in below the flag ship. The floats, with the guns which were in honor of the hero of Appomattox. The torpedo boats and revenue cutters anchored opposite the line of war ships under the bluff and between these two floats was the vice part of the parade passed in review.

Mr. Adm. Howison gracefully yielded the precedence to Mr. Adm. Sampson in the matter of ships of division. The commander of the South Atlantic station was simply present as a spectator and brought up the end of the line with the Chicago. Mr. Adm. Sampson followed the Olympia in the New York, but saw the regatta while Howison flew the blue. Friday night the grandest illuminations and fireworks displays in the history of the city will occur. Thursday afternoon there was a preliminary illumination of the water front where all the buildings on the water front were lighted up. On the Brooklyn bridge, in letters of living fire, the words, "Welcome Dewey," flashed the words, "Welcome Dewey," while simultaneously from the shores of the East and North rivers, Staten and Governor's islands, red fire glowed and scattered, sending up fantastic clouds of smoke, turning the calm water into a sea of lurid flame and transforming the craft in the harbor into red specters.

The local municipal authorities are somewhat piqued because Gov. Roosevelt has extended the term of his visit to the state to the admiral before his official greeting on behalf of the city. This ceremony occurred Friday. While much poetry was being intoned down the bay Thursday, much more was burned Friday during the great naval pageant up the Hudson river. The marine parade eclipsed all previous water pageants in this city of the world. The parade started at 1 o'clock in four divisions. First came the warships, headed by the Olympia and flanked on either side by the torpedo boats. They were followed by a fleet of white revenue cutters. Following them were the steam yachts, in a double column, led by the Corsair, the flagship of the New York Yacht club.

THE FAMOUS CRAFT.

Olympia Will Go Out of Commission at the Boston Navy Yard—Dewey to Go to His Vermont Home.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Secretary Long has been urged by the governor of Massachusetts and the mayor of Boston to send the Olympia, as a day for the reception of Adm. Dewey at Boston. The matter was brought to the attention of the admiral and he asked that a decision be deferred until the New York ceremonies are over and he has had an opportunity to consult personally with Secretary Long.

Secretary Long Thursday replied to the application of the citizens of Norfolk and vicinity to have the Olympia sent to Hampton Roads in company with the North Atlantic squadron, declining to sanction the proposition. The Olympia is to go out of commission at the Boston navy yard, so that the people of Boston will have an opportunity to see the famous craft, though it may not be with the great admiral aboard, as he is likely to be detached in the course of a few days. Being actually already detached from command of the Asiatic station, he is, in fact, scarcely in need of an order of detachment, and may leave for his home in Vermont at his own pleasure. It is believed that he will avail himself of that privilege immediately after his visit to Washington next week.
